

Evening Post. 4 February 1916 (Papers Past) [18/05/2026]

THE EVACUATION OF GALLIPOLI
VETERANS WERE SURPRISED.
(BY TELEGRAPH. — SPECIAL TO THE POST.)

AUCKLAND, This Day.

Veterans, interviewed, said they, were surprised at the evacuation of Gallipoli.

MAJOR DICK, OF WELLINGTON

Major C. Dick, of the Wellington Mounted Rifles (Main Body), was not wounded until fourteen weeks after the memorable landing. When the big attack came in the early part of August he was in the thick of the fighting, and sustained a wound in the right forearm, which caused partial paralysis of the right hand. From the effects of this he is happily recovering. As in the case of other officers and men, Major Dick cannot say enough for the manner in which they were received and entertained by the people of England.

New Zealand Herald. 4 February 1916 (Papers Past) [05/04/2015]

HURT IN BAYONET CHARGE.
MAJOR C. DICK'S EXPERIENCE.
ECHO OF SUYLA BAY

After being at Gallipoli for three months, Major Charles Dick, Wellington Mounted Rifle Regiment, was wounded, and returned by the Rotorua yesterday. He left with the main body of the Expeditionary Force. On the night of August 6, when the Suvla Bay landing was effected, Major Dick was wounded in the forearm. The men charged on this occasion with empty magazines, and after a desperate bayonet attack, drove back the Turks. He went to Alexandria and subsequently to England, where an operation on his arm was successfully performed. Major Dick was also high in his praise of the behaviour of the men during the fighting. The people of England had been exceptionally good to both officers and men of the New Zealand and Australian forces.

Feilding Star. 5 February 1916 (Papers Past) [18/05/2026]

Major C. Dick, of Kimbolton, who has just returned home, was not wounded until 14 weeks after the memorable first landing. When the big attack came in the early part of August he was in the thick of the fighting, and sustained a wound in the right forearm, which caused partial paralysis of the right hand. From the effects of this he is happily recovering. As in the case of other officers and men, Major Dick cannot say enough for the manner in which they were received and entertained by the people of England.